Background

I'm a Swedish amateur golfer who has represented Sweden at junior and men's level and Europe in St. Andrews Trophy. My merits include a silver medal from the European Team Championships, a bronze medal from the European Boys Team Championships whilst representing Sweden, the best ranked amateur on the Nordic professional tour, participation in DP World Tour (European Tour) along with a large number of top place finishes in international amateur championships.

Current situation

My ambition is to implement a fully professional setup for my golf, achieved by having a strong team around me.

The goal is to operate with the same setup as the world's best professional players, providing me with the optimal conditions to reach my goals.

Choice of path and personal development

I started playing golf relatively late but since the age of 15 I have practiced golf on a full time basis. My priority is golf, but I also have the ambition to develop as an individual both through further education and in other interests. Therefore I build my own CV through hand-picked courses and work. All with the aim that when my golf career ends, hopefully not for many years, these experiences will have given me the best education and personal development.

The path that I have chosen is not the usual path to take since I didn't move to the U.S. for college golf. Both my team and I are happy to break new ground. In addition, I see a professional setup to strive for and develop in is the best education I can get both when it comes to personal development and future professional developments.

Future

Right now, the plan is to continue as an amateur throughout 2024. My decision is based on the fact that I want to be completely ready before taking the step into professional golf. The goal is to reach a level where statistically I will have a good chance to establish myself, at the least at Challenge Tour level, before I turn pro. Within my team, we have extensive statistics showing how close I am to this goal. In 2023, I have reduced the remaining gap to be ready for the Challenge Tour by half, which means I am clearly approaching this goal.

The reason I continue as an amateur is that it gives me the opportunity to be in very developing environments by playing on some of the best courses in the world and facing very good competition. This gives me valuable experience and is, in my opinion, the set-up that best prepares me for a successful professional career.

Support

Of course, my path costs significantly more than the traditional paths. Therefore, I will gratefully accept any contacts you have who may be interested in a collaboration with me.
